

The Weekly Bulletin

December 29/January 3, 2016

HAPPENING THIS WEEK:

"Equity Ministry: Race, Class and Culture and how they relate to Spiritual Life as Unitarian Universalists" Workshop with Adam Dyer, Sunday | 1/3 | 1:00 - 5:00 pm.

In this gathering/workshop you will have a chance to learn more about "Equity Ministry" and how much a part of Unitarian Universalism equity truly is. First we will learn about equity in policy and justice work and discuss what your community looks like in relation to the equity agenda. Then, building on other work your community is already doing, we will take time to identify specific instances where you as an individual and as a community can connect what you continue to learn about race, class and culture to your lived experience as people in a faith community.

Four award-winning artists, Suzanne Barnes, Cynthia Schubert, Wendy Roberts, and Dawn Yoshimura have produced 'Convergence', a collaborative art exhibit for the community to enjoy. The show's theme was created during weekly get-togethers, where they brainstormed about their similarities and differences. All four women are painters who currently live in Oahu, but vary in their chosen media, age, and geographical origins. This convergence of four creative minds led to the title of the show. They endeavor to challenge each other in a supportive manner.

Justice Action Themes at First Unitarian

On January 31 Fifth Sunday, as Economic/Racial Justice Action continues, we also launch our 'Āina Energy/Climate Justice Theme. a January 2016 Fifth Sunday Service (Sermon: Steve Lohse; WA: Bill Scarvie);
